01

Wolfram Zwecker

Wolfram Zwecker's investigative series for Beeld on the corruption in the Civil Aviation Authority was of national concern and especially horrifying when it emerged that pilots licenses could be bought. "He displayed integrity and personal courage to continue his investigation despite official pressure and anonymous threats."

02

Mathatha Tsedu

Judges praised Mathatha Tsedu for his role in bolstering journalistic integrity and putting media freedom and independence out of reach from the racial, party political and sectarian interests. Tsedu was also commended for the exceptional leadership role he has played, not only at The Star, but also in organisations such as MWASA, the Forum for Black Journalists and SANEF, particularly over the past year when journalists have had to engage on issues of race, transformation and sectarian issues.
