

Nat Nakasa – 2001 Awards

Winners

01

Mzilikazi wa Afrika

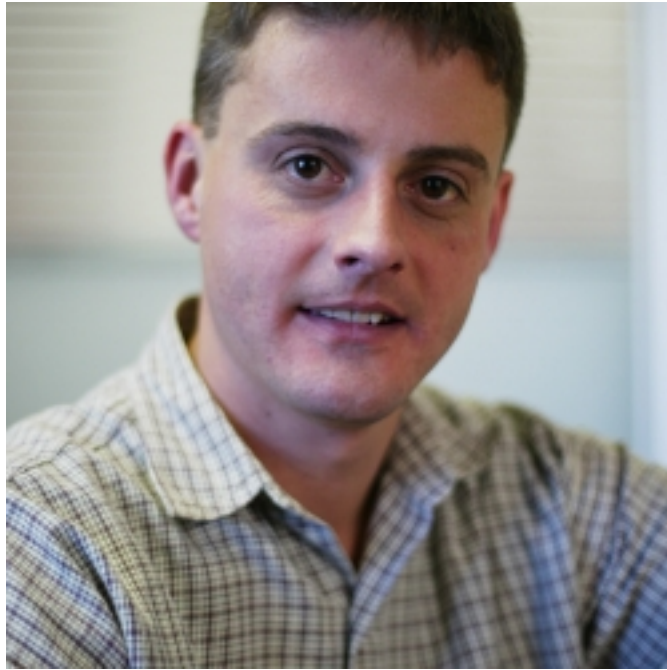

The Nat Nakasa Award was presented to the Sunday Times investigative team, which comprises of André Jurgens, Jessica Bezuidenhout and Mzilikazi wa Afrika for their coverage of the controversial R43 billion arms deal. Judges praised the team of three journalists for taking investigative journalism to new heights in South Africa. "These journalists relentlessly probed and cajoled and built up their case through thorough and impeccable research and by winning the trust of their sources. Tony Yengeni has fallen and more are likely to follow," PMSA Media Freedom Committee chairperson Govin Reddy said at the award ceremony.

02

Jessica Bezuidenhout

The Nat Nakasa Award was presented to the Sunday Times investigative team, which comprises of André Jurgens, Jessica Bezuidenhout and Mzilikazi wa Afrika for their coverage of the controversial R43 billion arms deal. Judges praised the team of three journalists for taking investigative journalism to new heights in South Africa. "These journalists relentlessly probed and cajoled and built up their case through thorough and impeccable research and by winning the trust of their sources. Tony Yengeni has fallen and more are likely to follow," PMSA Media Freedom Committee chairperson Govin Reddy said at the award ceremony.

André Jurgens

The Nat Nakasa Award was presented to the Sunday Times investigative team, which comprises of André Jurgens, Jessica Bezuidenhout and Mzilikazi wa Afrika for their coverage of the controversial R43 billion arms deal. Judges praised the team of three journalists for taking investigative journalism to new heights in South Africa. "These journalists relentlessly probed and cajoled and built up their case through thorough and impeccable research and by winning the trust of their sources. Tony Yengeni has fallen and more are likely to follow," PMSA Media Freedom Committee chairperson Govin Reddy said at the award ceremony.