

Print Media S.A Fellows – 2004 Awards

Winners

01

Cathy Pestana

Cathy Pestana has constantly supported and dedicated her time by assisting the leaders of Print Media SA throughout its turbulent years. She has contributed effectively and efficiently in managing the administration, communication to the industry, events and awards of Print Media SA, the Newspaper Association of South Africa and the Community Press Association.

02

Terry Moolman

Terry Moolman contributed in expanding the reach of print media to urban and rural communities through the establishment of community newspapers, free sheets and presses throughout South Africa. Today, community papers contribute towards a culture of reading and create opportunities for communities. (Photograph courtesy of Sunday Times)

03

Thami Mazwai

Thami Mazwai has played an instrumental role furthering and protecting the interest of black journalism through his contributions in being a member of various media organisations. His determination and passion for journalism is clear in his feisty spirit in addressing controversial issues, even if it be unpalatable to some of his colleagues.

04

Natasha Stretton

Natasha Stretton contributed towards managing the affairs of the former Print Development Unit. She participated in securing and managing the negotiations with government in the establishment of the Media Development and Diversity Agency. Her dedication and enormous contributions helped further the ideals of the industry, through her leadership and management of Print Media SA's affairs.

05

Salie de Swardt

For 36 years of service to the industry Salie de Swardt, has enormously contributed and committed furthering the interests of the newspaper and magazine market and to the affairs of Print Media SA. His passion for the industry is evident through the key role he has played in the establishment of a number of newspaper and magazine titles, and the development of the Naspers group into the publishing powerhouse it is today